DEMOCRATIC GAIN FORECAST

A Discourse In Which the Telephone Proves Apostle Peter Aint No Angel

Editorial by Alex. H. Washburn

Peter A. Deisch, of Helena, is Arkansas' No. 1 lobbyist.

He is in touch with things—and what he is in touch with usually winds up sooner or later in an election that puts the "touch" on the people.

A dozen years ago he was a state senator. He has been coasting ever since as a lobbyist, free-wheeling along first on one thing and then another.

When I met him at Little Rock the spring of 1925 he was directing the legislative lobby for the Williamson-Rainey bond bill, which was defeated.

This year he turns up as apostle for the Arkansas Sheriffs association and other county officers' lobbies—doing the man-on-the-flying-trapeze act (I grab!) for the Four-Year Term Amendment (No. 21).

Deisch has himself interviewed at Little Rock in behalf of the Four-Year-Term Amendment, and this is the report:

QUESTION—How about the country press?

ANSWER—Oh, the country papers are for us.

QUESTION—Is that because they are afraid they will lose county advertising, if they oppose you?

ANSWER—Well, I'll tell you about that. We are a power in our communities, naturally, or we wouldn't be elected. I mean the office-holders. Well, the country papers suffered a terrible blow when the legislature cut out the publication of delinquent tax lists. Now the country editors probably feel that if they are friendly toward us, maybe we might help them to get that law back again. I believe publication of delinquent tax lists is a good thing, for several reasons, and I think the law shouldn't have been repealed. But don't misunderstand me. I deny that I've ever promised the country editors anything, or even mentioned it to them, but they've probably thought of it themselves and are governed accordingly.

So much for what Mr. Deisch says.

But on Saturday, October 20, Armitage Harper, secretary of the Arkansas Press association, of which I am a member, telephoned me from Little Rock.

Harper told me that the people in charge of headquarters for the Four-Year-Term Amendment wanted to make this proposition to the newspapers:

Go ahead and support Nos. 19 and 20 if you want to, and if you can't conscientiously support No. 21 (the Four-Year-Term Amendment) AT LEAST SAY NOTHING ABOUT IT—in return for which, No. 21 headquarters would persuade the next legislature to RESTORE THE DELINQUENT TAX LIST PUBLICATION.

This was Saturday, October 20, late in the afternoon—and Secretary Harper told me I was the 10th proprietor he had talked to on the 'phone that day.

Secretary Harper's survey revealed, as might be expected, that the individual editors were going their individual ways.

Here in Hope, as in past years, I proposed to kick the slats out of the county officials' lobbies—and the happy effect of Secretary Harper's long-distance message was to cause me to turn the bed upside down again and discover one more slat I had missed!

May I urge you, please: Vote for No. 19 and No. 20 guaranteeing a referendum on tax increases and bond issues—for Arkansas.

And for Mr. Deisch—scratch No. 21.

He aint no angel anyway—just going around the world doing hisself good.

Senator Robinson Recalls What He Told Acquaintances Overseas

WE DON'T LIKE IT

America Doesn't Understand European Problems and Ugly Intrigue

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Senator Joe T. Robinson, Democratic leader, said Wednesday he had assured European leaders that the United States would not supply men, munitions or sympathy to any nation in the event of another European war.

Speaking before the Little Rock Junior Bar association Tuesday night, Robinson declared that everywhere he went on his recent visit to Europe he was asked about this nation's attitude in the event of a war.

"I assured every one of my inquirers," the senator said, "that the United States does not understand Europe's complicated political problems and has no patience with the intrigues through which the various countries seek to gain their ends."

Returning from his European tour last week Robinson expressed the view that a European war would come at "no remote time."

After arranging for medical care for the seriously injured engineer, Boris took the driver's place and drove the locomotive the rest of the way into Varna.

A passion for mechanical contrivances had led the king to take every opportunity to handle locomotives which he does expertly.

HAMPTON, Ark.—(AP)—Calhoun county officers aided by a number of citizens Tuesday night had found no trace of Clinton Matlock, negro, who was sought on murder charges in the slaying Monday of Roy Spear, 45, son of a prominent Tinsman, Ark., merchant.

Sheriff C. I. Abbott said murder charges were filed against the negro Tuesday following the death of Spear in a Little Rock hospital from a fractured skull received when struck on the head.

The officer said he believed Matlock was hiding in the vicinity of his home, four and a half miles south of here, but some 100 persons aiding in the hunt had failed to find a trace of him Tuesday night.

The sheriff said Matlock had served a two year sentence on theft charges about four years ago.

Discussing his recommendation for a central agency to effect the refunding of the 29-million-dollar school debt in much the same way as the highway debt was adjusted, Phipps revealed that 37 school districts had been forced to cease operation of schools because of federal court injunctions obtained by the bondholders, tying up all funds until an adjustment of the bonded debt is made.

Both Sides Charge Fraudulent Voting

Kitchens and Parks Assert Negroes Voted in Hempstead County

HAMBURG, Ark.—The Kitchens-Parks congressional nomination contest has been adjourned until next Monday by Judge Patrick Henry.

This action was to enable the litigants to take depositions in the various counties of the district thus eliminating the expense of bringing so many witnesses to testify in court here.

Kitchens had taken depositions in several of the counties after having served notice on Parks that he intended to do so. However, Judge Henry ruled that these depositions did not comply with legal requirements. He ruled that all depositions must be taken in the interrogatory.

Kitchens, who on the face of the returns, was defeated by Congressman Tilman B. Parks, is contesting the nomination on the ground that gross fraud was committed in the runoff primary of August 28.

In the final amendment to the original complaint Kitchens asks that the vote of the Parks precinct be thrown out because of gross frauds practiced there.

He also asks that the vote of the Crossett box be thrown out because he alleges that the regularly-appointed election officials in that precinct were "hand-picked" by E. C. Aiken, secretary of the Ashley County Democratic Central Committee. He charges that these election officials were instructed to pay no attention to the count of the ballots but to give Parks as many votes as he needed to elect him.

He charges that in 11 precincts of Onacha county 310 illegal votes were cast and counted for Parks.

He alleges that in seven precincts of Hempstead county, 219 illegal votes were cast and counted for Parks. He charges that this number included votes of 39 negroes cast at Precinct 1-B of Hope and 23 negroes at Precinct No. 5 at Hope.

The amended complaint says that 716 illegal votes were cast and counted for Parks in 11 precincts of Clark county.

The charges include 99 illegal votes for Parks in five precincts of Lafayette county.

The complaint asks that the court throw out this total of 1,433 illegal votes alleged to have been counted for Parks.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Democratic leaders told President Roosevelt Wednesday that the New Deal will receive a smashing endorsement in next Tuesday's election despite Republican forecasts that the G. O. P. will score gains in congress.

Democratic headquarters assured the president after a survey that the Democratic majority in the senate would increase, with probably a gain of strength in the house.

Republicans disputed a prediction by Postmaster General Farley that Democrats would control both branches of the next congress by two-thirds majorities.

Republican headquarters declined to concede any senate losses and said they would pick up about 40 house posts.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A high voltage voter interest in next Tuesday's first nationwide test of the new deal, with 47,949,928 men and women qualifying themselves to vote, was shown Tuesday by an Associated Press compilation.

This figure, unusually high for an "off year" battle, was indicated in a gathering of registrations, and official and unofficial estimates of voting strength in all the states which ballot November 6.

Although falling a million below the record registration brought about by the Roosevelt-Hoover presidential contest in 1932, the estimate is more than 5,000,000 above that for the Hoover-Smith election in 1928.

Two years ago the number of qualified voters as revised from latest statistics, was 48,962,530. The actual vote in the presidential contest was 39,791,886, a record. It compared with 36,786,669 votes cast in the 1928 race.

While the absence of a presidential contest this year is responsible for some falling off, spirited campaigns for senate seats, the governor's chairs in some states and hot races for the house of representatives in many districts, have spurred voters to qualify.

While the majority of states indicate an increased voting strength compared with two years ago, a score of commonwealths show a falling off in qualified voters.

Despite the tense races in New York, that state's estimated voting strength this year is 4,766,000, more than half a million below the 1932 figure.

Pennsylvanians, who have hotly contested senatorial and gubernatorial races, have registered in even larger number than in the last presidential year. The 4,192,241 registrations are 280,000 higher than in 1930.

Illinois, having no races for senator or governor, shows lagging interest in the congressional races. The indicated voting strength there this year has dropped almost half a million, to an estimated 3,650,000.

3 Million in California

California, with its intensive race for governor, shows a quarter of a million more voters have qualified this year.

Kidney Drop Is Often Due to Weight Cut

Sometimes the ligaments which hold up the organs in the abdominal cavity relax or stretch so that the organs drop from their usual positions. Organs naturally function best when they are located properly and when the blood vessels, nerves, and other structures associated with them are not under any unusual strain.

A good many people know about the possibility of dropping of the intestines in the abdomen, but few have realized that the kidneys, the spleen, or other organs may also drop.

Movable kidney is most common in women. Out of 687 cases seen in one hospital, 584 were in women and only 103 in men. Most often it is the right kidney that drops down rather than the left.

Presumably the greater frequency in women is due to the fact that they used to compress their upper abdomens considerably by tight lacing. No doubt also the disturbances of structure associated with childbirth are partially responsible.

In many cases considerable reductions in weight by women who have been fat causes the fat to drop away from around the kidney and thus to let the structures down.

In a few instances in man the dropping of the kidney seems to be associated with the lifting of heavy weights.

The doctor can find out whether the kidney is in its proper position by examining the patient with his hands, since if the patient is thin enough, the kidney can accurately be felt through the wall of the abdomen.

It is also possible, through use of the X-ray, to take pictures of the kidney to see the giving of drugs which localize in it and then to determine where the kidney lies in relationship to other structures.

There are some cases in which the kidney will twist so as to pull on the blood vessels or other structures associated with it. A sudden exertion or standing for a long time may bring on an attack.

When this occurs, the patient has a severe pain, nausea, and sometimes vomiting and sometimes collapse. Frequently there is a chill.

In many cases also the flow of fluid from the kidney is interfered with by the twisting or strain.

In most cases a person who has a movable kidney can get relief by wearing an abdominal support. When there is severe pain, nausea, or vomiting at frequent intervals, it may become necessary to operate on these patients to fix the kidney into position.

One expert found that 19 out of 20 women got relief by wearing the proper kinds of supports, but others have found only half of those treated with supports free of their symptoms.

It is interesting to find that a few cases are relieved of their conditions by putting on some of the weight lost by stringent reduction.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTON

He Was the Biggest Rascal of All Time
Czar's Spy Aided Reds—and Put Them in Prison

"Aseff the Spy," by Boris Nikolaevsky, is the biography of one of the most complete rascals who ever lived. If that statement sounds a bit strong, consider what the man did. Aseff was a spy for the secret police, or Ochrana, of czarist Russia at the beginning of this century. As such, he was instructed to worm his way into the revolutionists' councils. He did so with such amazing success that he actually became the head of the terrorist branch of the Social Revolutionary Party. To keep in the good graces of the revolutionists, he had to work at his job. He did, with a vengeance. He plotted and put through the assassination of the Grand Duke Sergei, uncle of Czar Nicholas II, and the assassination of Minister of the Interior Plehve—who had cooked up the plan by which Aseff joined the revolutionists!

On the other hand, he turned as many revolutionists over to the Ochrana as he could without arousing suspicions of himself. He took money from both sides, forwarded the plots of both parties, and all in all developed the art of working both ends against the middle about as completely as any man that ever lived.

He kept up this work for years, and he must have lived on the edge. Toward the end he actually tried to kill the czar himself, the plot failing through no fault of his own.

Ultimately exposed, he fled to Germany, where he died peacefully during the World War.

As a story of almost incredible plotting and double-crossing, this book is unique. Published by Doubleday, Doran and Co., it costs $2.50.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Plain Nursery Fails to Handle Infants.

Recently I listened to a gentleman who explained with enthusiasm the effect of color on children, the psychology of soothing shades and the gradual raising of tone in accordance with age.

Likewise I observed the art exhibit, children's crayons and paintings showing how folk express themselves in color. This, I'll say, was marvelous.

Recently I was treated to an exhibition of baby trousseaus and nursery furnishings in pastels that would grace a morning in heaven. Soft color, it seems, is so necessary to a baby's nerves and happiness.

And yesterday I read what an authority had to say about special walls, rug designs and specially-made blinds as well as sectional furniture that could be added to each birthday and so on.

All of which makes people a bit more conscious of the places in which little people sleep, play and live.

On the Other Hand—

But let those of us who cannot manage it that way dry our tears. The vast majority are doing pretty well to have a good roof and a milk bottle on the doorstep, and in the cellar and shed on the run-arounds. If bed-clothes and floors are clean and the walls wiped down, many mothers feel they have done their utmost, and they have.

As for color—yes, I'll grant that its peculiar combinations are delightful in a child's eyes. A baby in a red room might react unfavorably to the inevitable glare. And a four-year-old probably would get bored and weary in an eternally gray room with drab toys. However, children are outdoors a lot. Except in unfortunate districts there is a good bit of color in the world, almost any variety you like from the soft pastels of the sky to the red cars on the street and the yellow daffodils in a neighborhood.

How About Last Generation?

We of the old guard who slept in cradles beside the "big" bed, and grew up surrounded by heavy Nottingham lace curtains, our feet pattering over brown Brussels carpets, and enveloped by wall papers of large gilt designs, managed to wangle along some way. All the pinks and blues we had were probably a satin box somewhere that was yanked off after the second washing and the emotional excitement of the new baby was over.

We have also managed, I think, not only to retain our appreciation of color, but some of us have gone on to the connoisseur class and flatter ourselves that we know a lovely thing when we see it. Perhaps this is the very reason, because we weren't weary of "tones." Or perhaps the very awfulness of our congregate houses was a lesson to us.

Actually, I am sure the color promoters are doing needed pioneer work, and it is often as cheap to get the beautiful as the ugly. But let any mother look over the plain little crib and monkish-plain cubicle with discouragement and misgivings because there are no cloud effects, let her sleep well. Her baby will be neither color blind nor a moron. He might even grow up to be a specialist on home furnishings.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

©1934 NEA Syndicate

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When CHARLES MORDEN, reporter for The Blade, in town and DAN BLEEKER, publisher, were talking over the editorial, to solve the murder, Morden had been investigating the murder of FRANK B. CATHY, well-known and prominent, following the arrest of an important personage to be CATHY and accompanied by a girl called MARY BURGESS.

The day following Morden's death, CATHY was shot.

Griff, looking fresh and rested, reclined in the large lounge chair.

"You've got important information," he asked.

Bleeker nodded, took a notebook from his pocket.

"In the first place," he said, "we found the taxi driver."

"What does he remember?"

"A lot. He says that Morden engaged him by the hour on Thursday morning; that Morden went to a garage at the corner of Robinson street and Huntley street. He made some investigations there, went to the Elite Apartments on 319 Robinson street, returned to the cab within a matter of five minutes, went to Ninth and Central streets, had the cab park around the corner on Central while Morden went into an office building somewhere near the corner of Ninth and Central. The cab driver thinks it may have been the Monardock building. Morden was gone for nearly half an hour, returned, and drove once more to the Elite Apartments. He stayed there for a few minutes, then returned to the cab and discharged it, remaining at the Elite Apartments."

Sidney Griff jumped to his feet, dropped the cigarette into an ash tray. His lazy relaxation had vanished as completely as a cloud wisps drifting from the edge of a snow-capped mountain out over a dry desert.

GRIF went his hand toward a battery of filing cabinets which lined one side of the room.

"I study crime," he said. "I study the modes and methods of operation. I study the habits of criminals. In those card indexes you'll find digests of every major crime for half a century. The big embezzlements! The big murders! The big hold-ups! Crimes of passion! Crimes of deliberation! Crimes of violence!"

"I've concentrated for years on the best methods of getting quick results in criminal cases, and here an ordinary newspaper reporter thinks of something that has entirely escaped my mind!"

"What do you mean?" Bleeker asked. "I don't see it. I don't get the sketch."

"The garage," said Griff, striding up and down the long room, flinging the words over his shoulder without turning his head. "It's a new city ordinance, of course, but I should have thought of its possibilities."

"I don't follow you," Bleeker remarked. "Do you think you know what Morden had in mind? What he was doing?"

"Of course I know what he had in mind and what he was doing!" Griff said, turning on his heel and striding back toward Bleeker, making fierce, impatient gestures with his hands as he walked, emphasizing his words with little jabs of his extended right forefinger. "It's

In the next installment Dan Bleeker comes across a love letter that seems to have played a part in the murder mystery.

"No matter," he said. "We'll run that down a little later. In the meantime we've got a live lead on this garage business. Suppose you have one of your men run over to the garage with a picture of Morden. Find out if Morden wasn't there making inquiries about the car that was registered in the name of Frank B. Cathay of Riverview. You can get that registration number by checking up the records in the Motor Vehicle Registration department. You can put through a telephone call and get that information."

"Now?" asked Bleeker.

Griff nodded.

"Let's get that disposed of," he said, "before we go any further. I want a check on that."

He jerked his head toward a desk telephone.

"You can use that telephone," he said.

Lou Tellegen, Old Actor, Is Suicide

Former Husband of Geraldine Farrar Stabs Himself to Death

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP)—Lou Tellegen, matinee idol of the silent film days, died Monday from seven stab wounds in his chest which police said he apparently inflicted with a pair of scissors.

The former husband of Geraldine Farrar, the opera singer, was found dying in the bathroom of his home, the blood-stained scissors near his unbreathed right arm. Tellegen, 52, died an hour later.

His health and the fear he was losing his mind were ascribed by police and his physician as the probable reason for the act. Detective Lieut. Frank Egan, who conducted an investigation, reported the death undoubtedly was suicide.

After his name began to fade from the cinema lights, Tellegen went through bankruptcy here in 1929 and was discharged after testifying he owed debts of $20,901 and had assets of only $2,200.

Only a few months, it seemed as though he might get another "break" in pictures. He was called to Hollywood to take part in "Caravan," but illness assailed him and after six weeks in a hospital he had to forego the part.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Brush Up On Beauty!—Your Complexion Can Rival Men's

Many modern authorities on skin care tell us that the daily cleansing with soap and water and the stimulating action of brush and razor contribute largely to the fact that men, generally speaking, have clearer complexions and fewer wrinkles than women. In addition, the members of the so-called stronger sex seem practically immune to sallowness and clogged pores.

If this is true—and it certainly sounds plausible—it's about time that girls started copying part of the male method of complexion care. There's no harm in trying anyway. After all, soap and water won't hurt the average skin. If later seems to be too drying, use nourishing cream afterward.

First, choose a good soap. There are many fine varieties and you shouldn't have any trouble finding one that just suits you. Then get a complexion brush. It should have soft, flexible bristles and a handle or base that is easy to grasp.

If you're serious about trying the soap and water method of cleansing, you probably will like a new complexion brush and soap set now on the cosmetic counters. The soap—a luscious smelling concoction that makes a good lather—contains a lot of milk. It comes in a little composition complexion bowl with a cover that keeps out dust. The accompanying brush is especially designed for use with the soap.

Remember that you aren't supposed to scrub your skin with a complexion brush. Grasp it firmly, whisk it across the soap and then, with light circular movements, gently massage the foamy suds over face and neck. Use no more pressure than is necessary to keep the tips of the hairs firmly in contact with the skin. Rinse several times.

NEXT: Masks.

Halloween

Without, the dark like folds of crape
Blots every star from sight,
For ghostly forms and goblin shape
Are all abroad tonight;
The bitter winds in fury howl
Like tortured souls unseen,
As imps and friends and witches prawl
Without on Halloween.

Within, how warm the fires glow
And jack-o-lanterns shine,
What happy songs and laughter flow
As golden as winter;
For all the spirits hiding here
Are those of what has been
Of age-old love and fun and cheer
Within on Halloween.

to reach the pole.

"Admiral Peary," Hayes said, "never was within 50 or more miles of the north pole. There have been many critics of Peary's claim on both sides of the Atlantic, and all disinterested inquiries have come to the same conclusion—that he didn't reach the pole; by this it may be understood he never was within 50 or more miles of his position. Peary said he returned from his camp at the pole to latitude 87 degrees, 47 minutes north, in no more than 36 hours. This is a distance of 130 statute miles, apart from the deviations over pack ice and drifting floes. Hence, a man 53 years old either walked considerably more than 75 miles a day for two days over a rough surface, or he never came near the pole."

Reviewing Byrd's flight, he said "thus at 9 a. m., on May 8, 1926, the vicinity of the north pole at last was attained and as most fitting by citizens of the United States."

Regarding Dr. Cook, Hayes submits Cook, in 1908, "probably reached at least as high a latitude as that attained by Admiral Peary the following year; that Cook's statements except in relation to his attainment of the north pole and possibly his glacial island, may be accepted as substantially genuine, truthful and accurate."
